

DARWIN DAY 2019

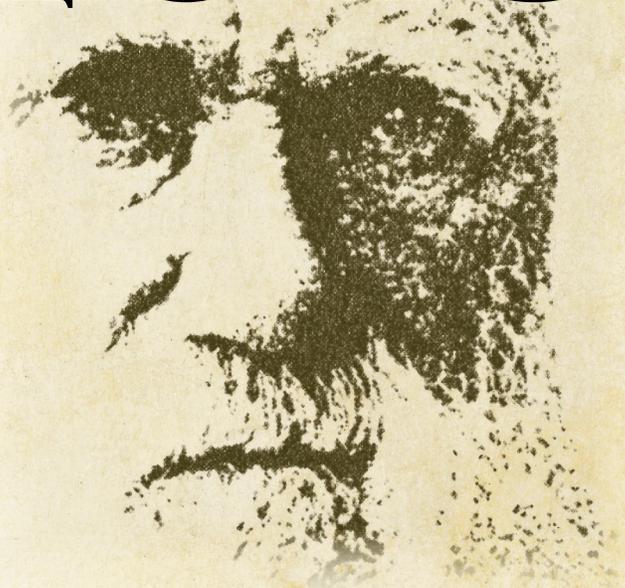

PUBLIC SCIENCE LECTURES

FREE AND OPEN TO THE PUBLIC!

Dr. Amanda Glaze,
Assistant Professor of Middle
Grades & Secondary Education,
Georgia Southern University

Amanda Glaze specializes in science teacher education, evolution education research and outreach, and professional development, alternating her time between the classroom and the field as an Assistant Professor of Middle Grades & Secondary Science Education at Georgia Southern University.

Reflections of an Evangelist Evolutionary Biologist: Walking in a World of Science and Faith

Science and religiosity are often viewed as two sides of a very contentious debate in which only one can “prevail.” The forced option of “us-vs-them” or “science-vs-faith” fails to recognize the rich understandings that can be found between the two. As a scientist reared in a Southern Baptist ministry family, the journey traveled in navigating these two worlds provided a wealth of experience as well as appreciation for the value, meaning, and deeper understandings of the world around us that can be afforded in both.

THURSDAY, FEB. 7 • 6-7 P.M.

Location: TJC Rogers Student Center, Apache Rooms
E. Lake St, Tyler, TX 75701

Mind and Soul: Intersections of Science and Faith in the Push for Science Literacy

Science literacy is one of the great goals for education in the 21st century, yet one of the most widely accepted tenets uniting the sciences is deemed as its greatest failure in science education. In matters of science and faith, it is easy to externally simplify choices to teach, openness to learning, and absence of acceptance as matters that are black and white. However, it is the shades of gray that lie between the two perceived extremes that provide us the most powerful understandings of human experiences and highlight tools for improving not only science education but society.

FRIDAY, FEB. 8 • 6-7 P.M.

Reception with free food and beverages from 5 to 6 p.m.
Location: UT Tyler University Theatre
3900 University Blvd., Tyler, TX 75799

For more information, visit darwindaytyler.org

Sponsored by

